N.H.S. 1976

Throughout history, man has recognized and marked for special honor those who excel. Ancient and medieval universities established their honor societies.

In election to the National Honor Society the secondary school faculty honors those who excel in their scholarly pursuits.

National Honor Societies serve to influence and elevate standards of scholarship. The object of all N.H.S. chapters is to create an enthusiasm for scholarship, to stimulate a desire to render service, to promote worthy leadership, and the development of character in students of the secondary schools of the nation.

The National Honor Society Motto is "Noblesse Obige". Their colors are Blue and Gold. The flower is the Yellow Rose.

The 1975-76 Volleyball team was not as successful as we would have liked to be, but success is not always measured by a season's record. Mrs. Barbara Stefani was our coach and she helped us all the way. At all the practices we learned to set, ouch! spike, wow! bump, gracefully--please, serve hard! Plus please don't forget those wind-sprints. We will sure miss the seniors, Donna Rea, Kate McElligott, Terry McElligott, Lori Bergstrom, and Arlynda Aldrich. But the new Freshman class will sure help us out for this coming season.

CHEERLEADERS

The 1975-76 cheerleaders did a great job illustrating the I.H.S. Cardinal spirit at football and basketball games this year. They held Pep Rallies before the games and planned the activities for Homecoming Spirit week. They also did a routine at the District B Boys Basketball Tournament at Pendleton.

During the summer they attended cheerleading school at I.C.F. in Eugene.

Miss Black was the girls adviser until she had to leave. Barb Peterson filled in and did they ever appreciate her for taking the time to help them.

You really added a lot to the school year cheerleaders. Thanks for all you did!

KEEP ON DRUMIN' 48'S COM'IN

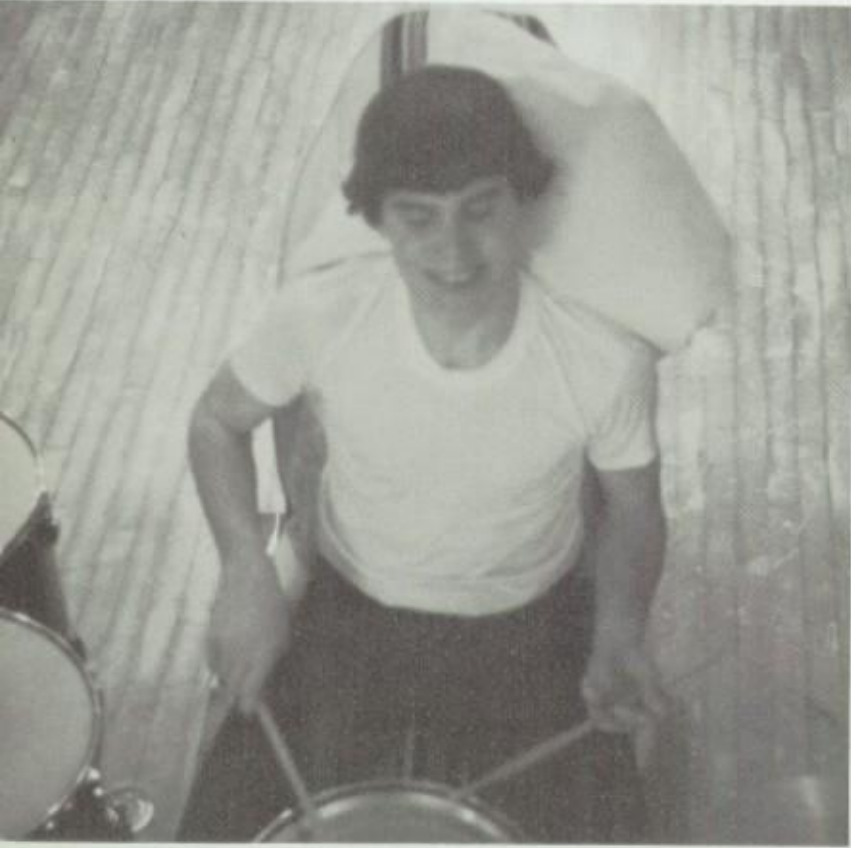

This year the band came up with a really original way to make money. They decided to have a Drum Marathon.

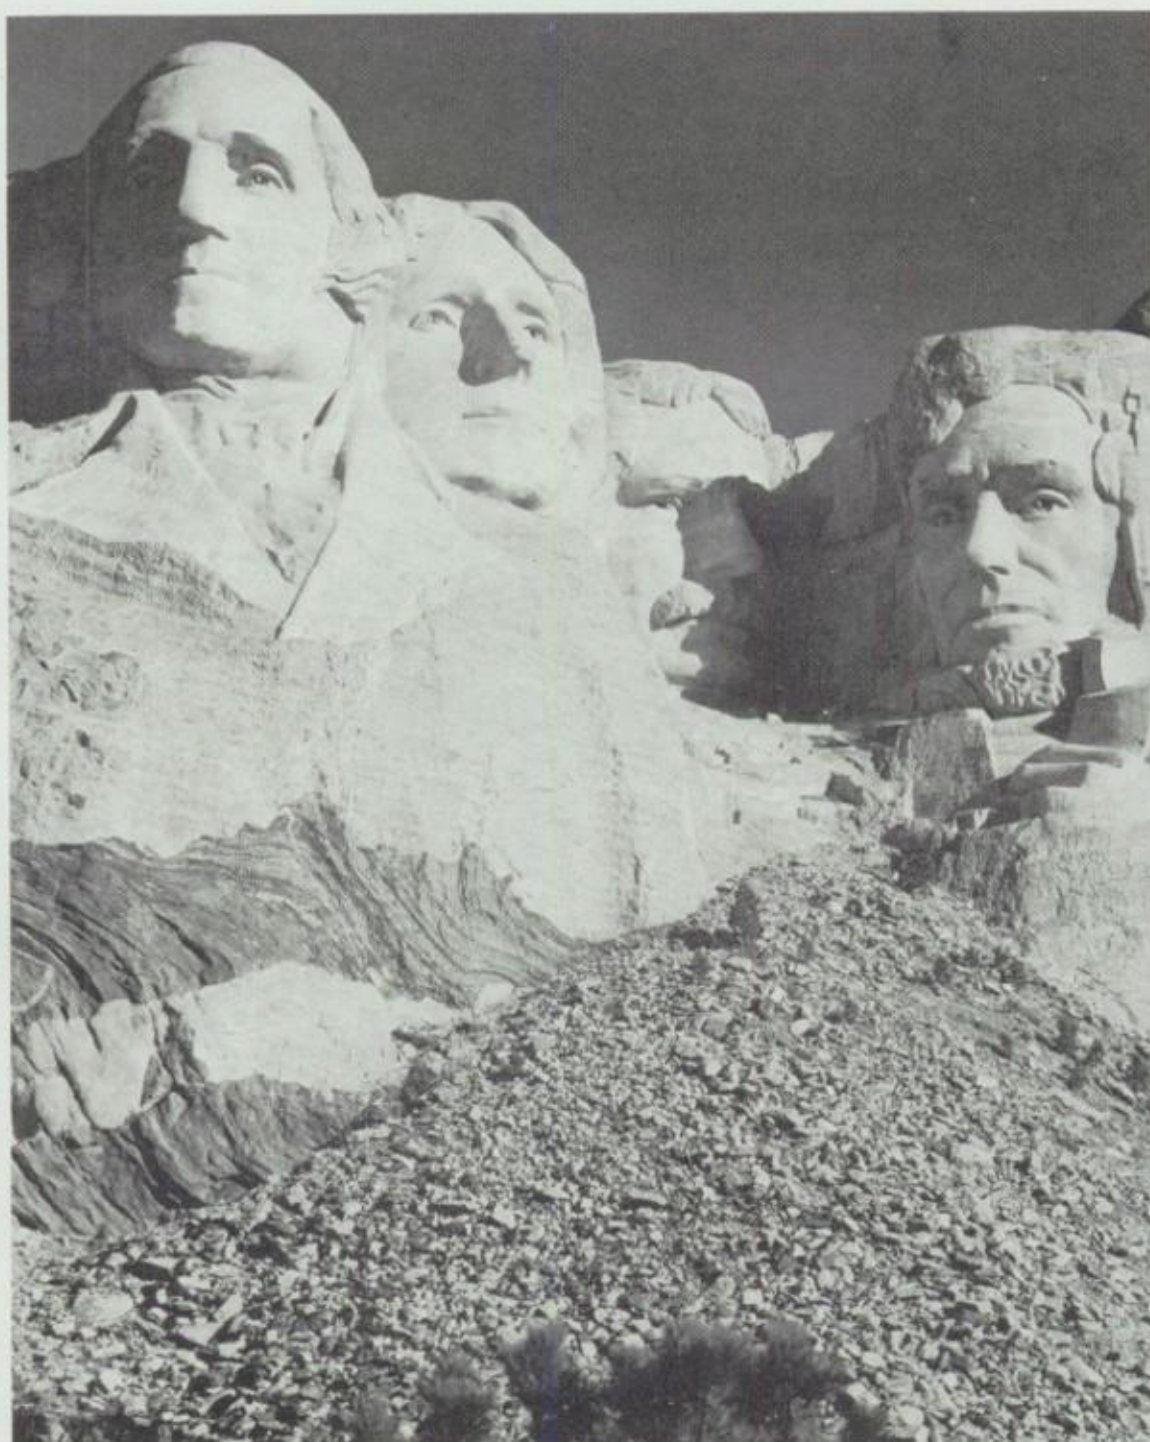

Friday night March 5, 6, 7 at 8:00 Larry took up the drum sticks and started playing. The first four hours of the 48 total hours were danced to by the public. Stuart & Richard Keene, Kim Gutierrez, and Miss Burton played along with Larry.

As the hours ticked slowly by diversions for Larry were made by playing Ping-Pong with one hand and the drums with the other. He also rode around town in a car playing the drums as he went.

Larry was bet that he couldn't play "Wipe Out" for 15 minutes. He did, not once but twice during the Marathon.

Ending the Marathon Sunday night, a Pot-Luck dinner was held and Larry went home to sleep.

CARDINALS STRIKE AGAIN

The Lone Cardinals were very successful this year in their Baseball season. The members of the team were: Bob Gates, Kim Gutierrez, Dan Akers, Skye Krebs, Tim Cheney, Joe Rietmann, Clint Carlson, Kevin McCabe and Dan McElligott. They were coached by Mr. LaRue and managed by Harvey Childers.

They almost made it to the top but they didn't get past the Wasco County team on their last game. The team worked hard all season and the teams record showed it. They tied for first with Sherman but Sherman got to go to District because they had the most azzi points.

PHILADELPHIA BANQUET

FREEDOM 1776-1976

This years Banquet was in keeping with our Nations 200th Birthday Celebration. Colors were a patriotic Red, White and Blue. The theme was Philadelphia Freedom. The prayer was given by Rev. William Graham.

Everyone had a good time as there was much laughing and talking heard while the servers, Susan Thompson, Natalie Tews, Carol McElligott, Brian Rietmann, Rick Gilbert and Dennis Thompson brought out the food which was typically American. Turkey, Dressing, Potatoes, Gravey, Green Beans, Hot Rolls, Relish Trays, Cranberry Sauce and best of all a choice of Cherry or Apple Pie for desert.

The highlights of the night seemed to run from the minor incident of a table collapsing and being held up by someones knees, to the parents tour of the Prom decorations.

A special thanks went to the Junior Mothers, for without their time and help, no one would have eaten!

"THE WAY THE WEST WAS WON"

Upon entering the "Old Gym" at the grade school in Lone on April 24th you may have said to yourself, "This can't be right" "Saddle Sore Saloon?" Instead of regular school type doors, weathered wood and swinging bar doors? Signs everywhere- Hang Your Spurs Here, Six Guns Here, Watch Your Step? Of curious nature I had to go on inside to see what kind of a mistake I had made. Here I found walls of weathered wood absolutely covered with Wanted Posters. One wall was covered with monstrous hides from Bear and Elk. Traps and pictures of old time Cowpokes were arranged neatly around the hides. Would you believe even a huge set of Texas Long Horns? One wall to were windows gave you the scene of down town Lone in the late 1800's, and of course all old Saloons had cute little dancing girls, so of course there were 6 or 8 girls lined up by the window doing the "Can Can." They were accompanied at an old piano by a tall man dressed in a vest and long sleeved shirt with plaid flare pants. I thought he looked like a dummy. As your eyes adjusted to the dark as there was a black rolling ceiling with chandeliers of Wagon Wheels that were adorned by red lights. These lights shown on round tables placed cosily around the large room. There was a long large L shaped bar made also of weathered wood at one end of the room. Looking closer at the Wanted Posters you could see the pictures were of the Lone Senior Class of course, why didn't I think, it was "The lone Prom".

Anyone from Lone knows that the following Monday after Prom would be the Mothers Tea-My, "What will the Mothers think of this!"

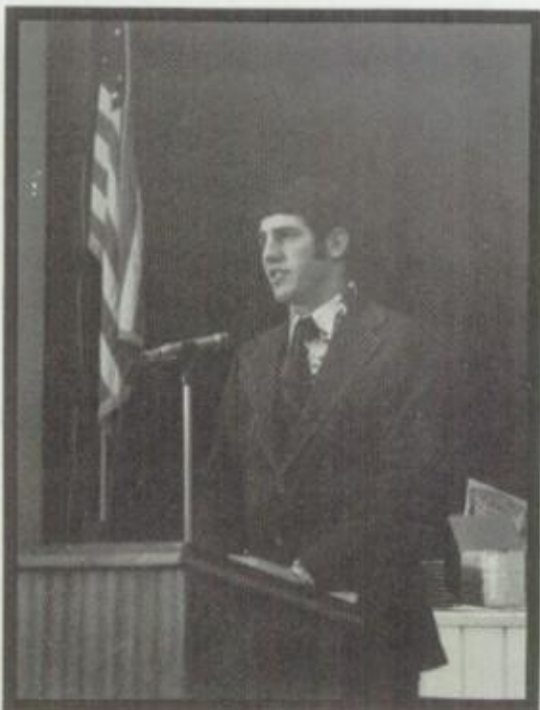

After a comical Antique Fashion Show and the G.A.A. Installation ceremony we all enjoyed refreshments of homemade fruit breads and punch. All Mothers agreed it was a Prom and Tea that would be remembered for a long time.

SENIOR CLASS PROPHECY

Like everything else our class organized, it was a flop. I arrived at Ione's city park on May 21, 1996 to help celebrate our class's twentieth reunion only to discover that I was the only one to answer the invitation.

I decided to search Ione's massive park one more time before heading home to spend my hard-earned vacation. Passing a park bench I was startled to hear a loud snoring sound. Upon further investigation I uncovered a sleeping body parked under the bench. I would have passed it by if it had not been for the fancy white silk-sequined jumpsuit that said "mo Jo" on the back. I took a good look at the silk clad sleeper, and decided that yes indeed, it was my old classmate Dan Thompson.

Tapping "Mo Jo" on the back I managed to rouse him from his slumber. Dan soon awakened and we began to talk. He told me that he used to be a famous bull-rider, but because of arthritis he was forced to quit. After treatment, though, he was as good as new and was now known as "Mo Jo the Rodeo Clown." He was very popular and earned close to a million on the Rodeo Clown Circuit the past year. I asked him if he knew about any of our old classmates.

"Well," replied the Rodeo Clown "Dan Akers is now quite famous. While at college he earned money on the side as a tattoo artist. His most popular number was his cobra tattoo. He's now in California making big money on it. I guess some guys just have the touch."

After a brief conversation we parted and I ventured in the direction of home. On Main Street I was suddenly surrounded by a herd of cattle. The cows were headed in 50 different directions under the watchful eye of a carefully dressed cowboy.

Right away I knew this horseman was one of those Main Street cowboys. Whether it was the five tale-tale lariets, the spotless white leather outfit, or the fact that he was on the horse backwards, I do not know. But something told me that this person was not an accomplished horseman.

The cowboy turned my way and with a start I recognized Joe Rietmann.

It seems that after college Joe had decided that the life of a sod-buster was not for him. Besides being about the best dime-store cowboy around Joe also held a record for goat-decorating at the Morrow County Rodeo and was quite proud of it. Joe was quite talkative and gave me the scoop on one of our classmates.

"Remember our Physics class?" asked Cowboy Joe.

How could I ever forget?

"Well," continued Joe, "Tim Cheney is now an eminent physicist and has proven several of our old theories including Skye's theory that when you turn a book over all the atoms fall out. He's working now to prove that the uncertainty principle is certainly certain, some of the time."

"You mentioned Skye, what's he doing now?" I asked Joe.

"You wouldn't believe me if I told you. Go visit him, he lives in the same old place," answered by cowboy classmate.

I tried to pursue the subject, but Joe would not budget, rather he galloped off in a backwards fashion yelling, "get along little doggy's", "yippy-yi-yo", and other cowboy gibberish.

I drove the short distance to Krebs' house only to find it completely changed. A large flashing neon sign topped the house proclaiming "Save the Coyote."

I closed my eyes, expecting this sight to disappear when I opened them again, but like a dream the sign remained.

I was greeted at the door by a large Indian man who introduced himself as Skye's brother-in-law, and partner in the fight to save the coyote. Skye had married an Indian maiden in college who had made him see the light about these poor, mistreated animals... the coyote that is. Skye was now President of the Prairie Wolf Preservation Society.

Skye invited me to watch his favorite afternoon talk-show with him and his family. There was a large crowd about the TV and Skye introduced all his in-laws to me. It seems that when he married the whole family from Great-Grandma to Uncle Running Water came to live with him, much to his delight.

The show started and silence fell upon the group. Onto the screen stepped the hostess of the show, none other than Donna Haynes.

Donna was rich and successful now and her show, "The Donna Haynes Variety Hour" was soon to be moved to prime time. Donna introduced her first guest as Mr. Universe 1996 and the curtains drew back to reveal a scantily clad Harvey Childers.

I watched in silent amazement as Harvey, turning slowly on his revolving pedestal, flexed his muscles to the approving audience. Harvey soon took his seat beside Donna and began to tell of his phenomenal rise to Mr. Universe. Apparently it all started when a bully at the beach had kicked sand in his face. Harvey had immediately sent for a Charles Atlas course and here he was today, flaunting the results.

A commercial flashed on the screen with a beautiful closeup of a large smile. Slowly the camera backed up to reveal a shapely model wearing a sexy black velvet dress lying on a black velvet couch. The model was holding a tube of toothpaste.

"Hi," said the TV lovely, "I'm Terry McElligott and I use Clean toothpaste. It gives me sex appeal."

Terry talked on for 60 seconds about her modeling and acting career, and how Clean toothpaste helped her, before Donna's show came back on.

Donna's next guest was soon introduced. A tall slender young lady strode across the stage wearing a basketball uniform and palming two basketballs. She turned to reveal the name Lori Bergstrom printed on her warmup jacket. Always quite the athlete in high school, Lori had turned somewhat the "super-jock" in college and was the first woman to make the professional basketball teams. She led the NBA for rebounds and turnovers the past year, quite an accomplishment.

Lori hammed it up for the television world as she exhibited all of her basketball skills in a 15 second show.

Right at the end of Lori's segment of the show a news bulletin flashed on the screen with some disturbing news.

"Los Angeles police have just captured the notorious leader of a motorcycle gang that has terrorized the city. Lauretta Piening, known to her followers as "Big Mama" was taken into custody at 4 p.m. this afternoon. Her gang "Lauretta's Devils" has claimed responsibility for several incidents including painting the windows of all the downtown businesses blue, her favorite color.

The news flashed off and once again focused in on Donna Haynes, who introduced her last guest. In stepped Arlynda Aldrich, resplendant in her ostrich feather belly dancing outfit. She had a large diamond in her belly-button, a gift from her eighth husband, the Shah of Iran. Arlynda danced a bit, sending her feathered costume into flight. Arlynda's stage name was originally "The Tap-Dancing Buzzard" but she soon discovered the world of exotic dancing and dropped the name. Instead, for a foreign sounding effect, she spelled her name backwards, Adnylra.

The show came to an end and I bid farewell to Skye, his wife, his 13 kids, his in-laws, and all of his in-laws kids.

Heading home I was flagged down at the school by a familiar looking person. Why, it was LeRoy Rea. What was he doing at the school?

LeRoy said that he was connected with the schools as a teacher. When asked what kind of teacher, LeRoy smiled broadly and replied, "a Drivers Ed teacher."

Not only that, he said, but he was also selected by the National High School Teachers Association as the teacher of the year. The government hired him in the summer months as a safe driving expert.

After regaining a little of my composure back, I asked LeRoy if he knew about any other classmates. He informed me that David Tucker had joined the Air Force soon after graduation and had worked his way up to a General. David held a record for the most peace-time airliners brought down while flying an ancient World War II bomber. They numbered 207 planes, including two 747s.

LeRoy also informed me on the whereabouts of David Zinter. David was a world renowned speed reader and had published several best-sellers on the subject. This startling change in Mr. Zinter's behavior had occurred soon after high school. The reason behind his change is still a deep, dark secret.

I soon left Lone and turned on my radio. I was greeted by a twangy, western song, and was about to change the station when the DJ came on saying "That, folks, was the country king himself, Richard Keene. Richard is the star of the Grand Ole Opry and has cut 20 gold albums to date not to mention selling close to 80 million singles.

Music again flooded my car, this time a melody of questionable origin. The DJ announced this tune as a violin solo by the greatest violin player of all times, Mr. Todd Peterson. Todd had turned to the musical world soon after his college years. Besides the violin Todd was also quite adept at playing the flute, clarinet, mandolin, harp and sandblocks. It truly must have been a tough job for Todd hiding such rare talent for so long.

As soon as I arrived home I settled down for an exciting night of TV. The first show was a sports spectacular rerun featuring some of the country's finest athletes.

A figure skater was featured skimming gracefully across the ice in black tights. The skater was a man and he was dancing, flipping, pirouetting, and leaping with the utmost ease. It was right after a rather spectacular leap that the TV announcer said "That's the routine that was used this January to win several gold medals in the Winter Olympics. He's really a champ, this talented figure skater Kim Gutierrez. Note his style, his grace, his form. Gutierrez is a winner, for sure, for sure."

This, to say the least, was somewhat of a shock to my system and by the time I recovered the next athlete was being introduced. Onto the tennis courts dashed a blonde haired man carrying a Wimbledon Trophy. Why, it was John Ekstrom. John had won seven Wimbledon trophies in the past two decades and was still doing well. He was known to millions as the golden-oldy of tennis. 38 and still going strong in a sport set aside for tennagers and the under-30 bracket.

The news came on with a special segment on the medicine world. It was to announce a major breakthrough in surgery. A certain Doctor Marie Cao had perfected the total transplant of an apes brain to a human, and vice-versa successfully.

The only problem was that the ape kept asking Marie to marry him. I guess that it could be listed as an occupational hazard.

The news continued for a short time and was soon replaced by what appeared to be a modern version of the old Lawrence Welk Show.

The show featured a hotsy-totsy band led by a very strange looking person with longish brown hair and white kid gloves. At the end of the song the man turned with a leer to the crowd and said "Welcome." It's soooo good to see you all joining me for the Larry Graham Show. We'll have a grand old time tonight as we visit the musical and religious world. Stay awhile, I have two special friends with me tonight that I dooo want you to meet."

With those words Mr. Graham turned his back on the TV audience and began to frantically conduct his band in the song "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

Checking the TV guides I saw that there was a good movie on another channel. Mind you I have nothing against Larry's show.

I was just reaching towards the set to change channels when a loud voice boomed from within it.

"Don't touch that dial, this is Reverend Robert J. Gates with some good news to free your tired spirit."

I crept away from the set in my most penitant manner and slunk down in my chair to listen to Bob.

Bob cleared his throat in a delicate fashion and continued, "Before I attempt to save you sinners I'd like to sing to you one of my own original songs. My selection tonight is "You're Soul will bat 1,000 with Jesus"; I will be accompanied by Mr. Graham's band."

Bob burst forth into song and after a brief pause announced, "Back by popular demand is a religious personality that is most respected. This woman is fantastic. May I introduce Sister Donna Rea."

In stepped Donna in a nun's habit, complete with pious look. Strange, but she didn't look a bit like I remembered her in high school.

The show ran on, filled with religion, song, and my three old classmates.

As I was rather tired I decided that it was beddy-by time and left, ready to return in the morning to my job as a personal nurse to the reclusive billionaire Gordon Meyers.

Bergie

A little late to be writing in our senior annual since we've only been out of school for a year and a half. Oh well I've never been on time for anything.

Well we've done alot of things together and had fun, even if it was only talking about people (one of our favorite pasttimes!) Well probably get punched out one of these times!

Well I hope we have fun ~~in~~ in La Grande! and don't get kicked out before the first term is over, but it doesn't seem like its gonna be very hard. Well let's party sometime okay Well my writing is driving me crazy so I had better quit and have a cig so I can calm my spastic had down.

Donna

Thought for the day:

Don't let anyone dance on your head, or a nigger wipe his hands on your shirt.

Well I hope you, Cindy, and I have some good times before the year is over, the worst part is we'll probably have some good times that we "can't" remember.

Oh well if all else fails we can always go talk to Todd and the guy with the "good bad"
(Pant pant) Oh shit I had better quit writing in here or you'll never talk to me again.
Maybe we can get some more Cold Duck for my birthday and chug it out of the bottle again. Well good luck in accounting.

Toddles,

Donna
